

The Minster Centre General Code of Ethics

This is binding upon all Minster Centre members, whether practitioners, trainers, supervisors or other staff.

1. We respect the dignity, worth and uniqueness of all individuals. We are committed to the promotion and protection of basic human rights, the integrity of the individual and the promotion of human growth, development and welfare. We affirm the self-determination, personal power and self-responsibility of clients and students.
2. We are concerned for the best interests of all clients and students. We make every effort to protect the welfare of those who seek our services. We use our skills and knowledge only for purposes consistent with these values and do not knowingly permit their misuse by others.
3. We respect the privacy of the individual and preserve the confidentiality of any information obtained through our professional practice or research. In general, and subject to the requirements of the law, we take care to prevent the identity of individuals or organisations being revealed deliberately or inadvertently without permission.
4. While demanding for ourselves freedom of inquiry and communication, we accept the responsibility this freedom implies with regard to competence and concern for the best interests of clients, research participants, students, colleagues and society. We recognise the boundaries of our own competence and do not practise outside the limits of our qualifications. We do not pretend knowledge we do not have. We refer clients on to other professionals whenever appropriate.
5. We do not practise, condone, facilitate or collude with any form of discrimination on the basis of race, colour, gender, sexual orientation, age, religion, national origin, marital status, political belief, mental or physical disability or any other preference or personal characteristic, condition or status. We recognise the existence of oppression in various parts of the world and accept the need for special training in dealing with certain groups.
6. We are open on the subjects of our training, qualifications, experience and supervision arrangements. We communicate about these in factual terms without value judgements.
7. Recognising that we are working in a field which is developing and highly active and in which new ideas frequently emerge, we make it our business to keep up to date by monitoring our own knowledge and capabilities; we have an ongoing commitment to develop our personal competencies.
8. We recognise that personal problems of our own may on occasion interfere with our professional effectiveness. We take care on such occasions to seek appropriate professional assistance, supervision, support or advice.